

Down Come The Buildings

7-1972

The Community of Ray, the past week, pitched in to tear down two old buildings on main street, the Anderson Hardware building and another building that used to house a bank.

Big sections of the buildings were hauled away at one time, as can be seen by the one photo by Cecil Hamers. The other picture shows the building gone, except for the old bank vault which was too tough to handle, but means will be found to move it out.

The buildings were removed to make way for new buildings to house the fire hall and city hall. Construction should start this fall.

New City Hall going up at Ray

Workmen prepare the foundation and install the sewer and water lines for the new $31,000 City Hall in

Ray. The structure on Ray's Main Street will house city and police offices plus Fire Department and Street Department equipment.

(Herald Photo)